	After a terrifying briefing, we were soon dispatched in the direction of the tunnel, clearly suggesting that we would be spared from the ravines of Gulfview Heights. As we crossed through the tunnel, however, the co-co-hare quietly snuck off along The Golden Way, leaving the rest of the pack to do battle with the shopping centre and then Grenfell Road. As we checked in all directions along Grenfell Road, we quickly spied the Bearded Clam waving us back across the Golden Way to do battle with the Badlands of Gulfview Heights. After a bit of innocent road running, we suddenly embarked on a steep downhill decent towards the ravines where we were confronted by what looked like a disused mining pond.  With Ninja leading the way, we were soon back on the roads of Gulfview Heights, where Elf managed to perform a 3.9 degree of difficulty breakdance dive, much to the amusement of the rest of the pack. Inspired by this effort we followed trail through the wastelands which separate the Wynn Vale lowlands from Gulfview Heights. Local residents are quite perplexed as to why this arid no-man's land exists, but rumour has it that a certain Russian resident had poisoned all the vegetation as it was restricting his views of the Semaphore Jetty!	8

A cunning check in the middle of the wasteland stumped us for a while but was eventually broken by a highly competitive Baxter, who was doing a bloody good imitation of someone who was eagerly looking to inherit an anchor!

As we headed back into the lower dales of Wynn Vale, it soon became clear that we were heading for a drink stop at the hares' abode. Rumour has it that this was supposed to be a Smithies Beer stop, but Russian and Bearded drank all the beer after the reccie the day before. Thankfully, Jesus had a choice bottle of port in the cupboard which would have been otherwise reserved for holy communion the following Sunday.

On such a bloody cold evening there is nothing better than a generous glass of port to warm up the muscles for the remaining jog home. The running pack was back in about one hour 15 minutes with the walkers arriving back slightly earlier. With no more port left to warm us up, Bearded fired up the trusty fire bucket, sending several tonnes of CO₂ in the direction of Gulfview Heights and plenty of smoke in the direction of the circle.

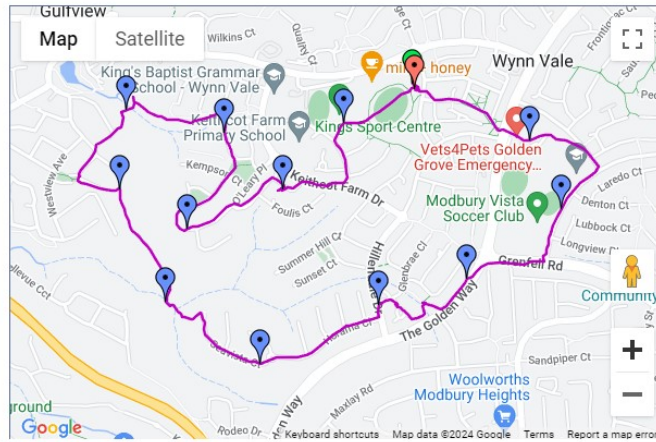

After a brief but entertaining circle, we were treated to some great curries and desert before extinguishing the fire bucket and retreating for the warmth of home. For anyone with any doubts, the AH3 can knowingly confirm that Wynn Vale lookout is one of the coldest places on the planet, apart from the snowfields of Antarctica or the heart of Peter Dutton.
