This week, you get two trashes for the price of one.

Hang about. 'The price of one'.....are you lot paying for this shit? If so, why aren't I seeing any cash. Hmmm... I have questions...

This trash contains a write up from the usual run on Monday which was Buddha's run of the year (according to him) - which has been provided to me by our RA, Bus Stop. There is also a bonus trash from the FAT BASTARDS run last Saturday. This was written up by Crunchy Crack. Thanks guys. I can't be everywhere.

Take it away Bus Stop:

With heavy rain all over Adelaide we could be confident that Buddha would surely avoid that bloody big hill in such shit weather! OR COULD WE?

Like the seasoned poker player he is, the hare gave absolutely nothing away except to advise that it would be an "unusual run"!

After running through the tunnel, we were soon making our way through the dog park in the direction of the Brownhill Creek Caravan Park. As we dodged the floating caravans coming towards us, the trail became bloody hard to find and slowed us down by several minutes.

Thankfully, the cavalry arrived (aka the walkers) who had been effectively briefed by our cunning hare. Up, up we went to enjoy the views of the city before heading up again to an anticipated drink stop at Travis Head's place. As Chesty called on-on up the driveway we were soon almost tasting the fine ale before Chesty eventually discovered that it was in fact a bloody false trail!

As we caught up with the walkers heading towards Mercedes College, we had ample opportunity to curse the cunning hare while admiring the magnificent houses along the way. As we headed up through Springfield, Elf took the optional tour around the mansions while the rest of the pack trusted Chesty's local knowledge, considerately waiting for the competitive bastard to reappear.

After a brief encounter with the Waite Reserve, we slowly meandered back towards home, encountering overflowing drains but pretty solid trail as we eventually made our way back to the run site. Runners were back in just over the hour, and mostly arrived back fairly dry, despite some (fake news) claims of rain on the run.

After a brief long circle, we enjoyed the well-deserved Kranskys and Tim Tams, very appreciative the welcome shelter that the council had thoughtfully provided.

Many thanks to the hare for a good run and great evening!

Now for the Trash for the FAT BASTARDS run.

Piggy Piggy Piggy - who ate all the pies

Before I let Crunchy tell us all about it, I'll just say it was an awesome day.

I must say though, I was promised bricks to carry, but ended up carrying a pebble. I'm assured that it wasn't because I was very close to being an 100kg Fat Bastard (phew) but apparently because bricks are expensive. Personally, I think it should just be called the Lazy Bastards run.

It WAS great fun.

Olive got lost at the beginning. How this is possible when the instructions were very well laid out in the Announcements section' is beyond me. However, her friend explained to me that because she is a primary school teacher, she needs pictures; as she doesn't know how to read properly.

Speaking of pictures, we have some photos of this run, thanks to Crunchy and Olive

*Thanks Flash for a fun day. On On - £oo$e Cchang€

Take it away Crunchy:

Flash did lay trail, but the rain washed it away so we had Live Hare.

Trail started at Hayborough Beach and followed the train line, bike path and board walk towards the croquet club. This was beer and pie stop #1. A very short walk then led up to the Anchorage hotel for beer stop #2.

Around the block and past the White Rabbit adult shop we stopped for more beers and pies at the Railway Turntable. Lovely hot pies and blue sheep awaited us. With views of the beach and the rescue helicopter passing overhead we all admired the railway infrastructure.

Beer stop number 4 was at Grosvenor Hotel, plenty of people and dogs to watch.

The Hare then led us the long way around the block to The Crown Hotel. More beers and we attempted to put a bet on the horses. Sadly none of us were carrying cash so no bets were made. And so we guessed the race winners based on amusing names.

The last part of trail led us over the road to Hotel Victor. We were definitely under dressed for this venue. Final beers were consumed and plans made to get us all back to Flash's house for a short circle and bbq nosh.
