13 Runners & 1 Dog - YAY

I came to today's run with high expectations. Chesty's runs are always pretty special and this run did not disappoint. I really do hope that we get to re-do this run one day in the light, as I'm sure torch light did not do it justice.

As we all gathered outside the baseball club, our Hare was continually overheard telling people there were toilets. None of us needed to go (we were good little campers and all 'went before we left), which seemed to frustrate our Hare. Perhaps he wanted us to find the crusty underpants that he'd planted outside. Luckily Unstoppable found them. In fact, she liked them so much that she picked them up, hoping to keep them.

When Olive arrived, she announced that she didn't like to cook, so we either had to find a co-hare who wanted to cook for her run next week, have pizza or do a pub run. After the sound of crickets subsided someone explained that this hash doesn't do pub runs. Olive then decided that Hash should disband. After some research Olive discovered that some of the AH3 have girlfriends/wives who 'co-hare' and cook while they set the run. This made her a bit jealous. So, this week let's all search Tinder, (or Grinder, or Hooker, or whatever the latest 'der' is) to help Olive find a girlfriend or wife who will cook the nosh for next week. Although, she seems to be in a relationship with that anchor, as she really doesn't seem to want to give it up.

It was a beautiful evening, crisp but still. After we were given our directions, the runners and walkers went their separate ways. Soon enough I found myself on very familiar grounds. Running through Ferguson Park brought back many memories. Looking to my left I saw my old high school. I'd spent many science lessons, daydreaming, looking out onto Ferguson Park. While the teacher droned on and on about Newton's laws or photosynthesis, I stared out at nature, watching the birdlife and looking for koalas. I'd spent many a P.E. lesson being forced to run through that park. Never in my wildest dreams did I ever think that I'd be running it again of my own free will.

It really is a beautiful area, with its many creeks and parks. I completely lost my bearings during this run, even though I thought I knew the area well. I swear we crossed Kensington Road about four times.

Not only this week did Chesty's run bring Bigus back to life, but at one-point we runners could be seen 'walking on water' as we hopped some rocks over a pond. Ninja was so excited to get to the other side, I honestly thought I was going to go ass-up any second.

On to the drink stop where Chesty was waiting with some 90-year-old hash port. Well, maybe not that old, but old enough to have us a bit worried. It wasn't only the age was the concern, but the fact that it was 'hash port'. Made me think of the hash song; "...quit complaining about the taste, we didn't piss in it this time". But I live to tell the tale, so obviously it was not too bad. In fact, it was rather good, and was a nice warming drink on a brisk night. As we ran on to 'OH' I could feel it splashing around in my belly.

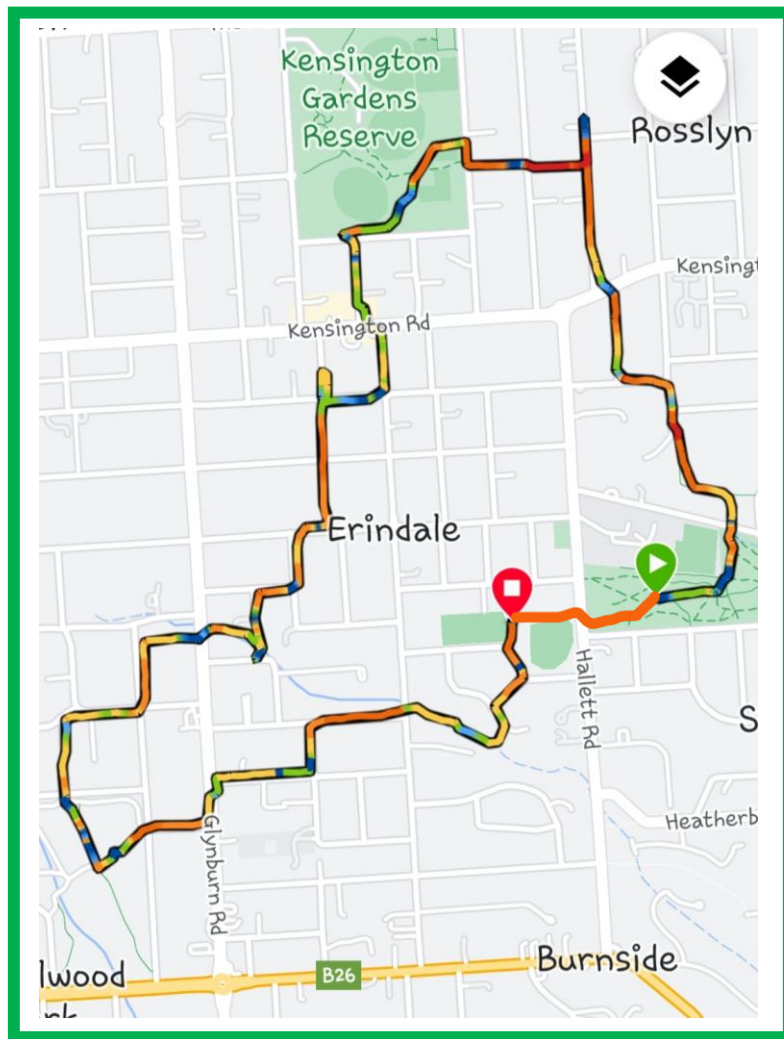

In my haste to get to Chesty's run this week, I forgot my hash bag. Therefore, I didn't have my pen and paper to take notes of the circle. This meant I needed to record it on my phone. I tell you, Betty Boop may have gotten eye cancer from looking at Mopeds wedgy (although I swear she said it was eye candy), but I sure as hell got ear cancer from having to listen to that crap twice. In fact, why should I be the only one to have to suffer. So that you can all listen to the dribble that I had to endure, I've included a link to the recording in the email. I promise with all my heart that the link is safe.

So, until next week, at location as yet unknown, our taste buds shall salivate in anticipation of some of the most delicious, gourmet pizza ever imaginable.
