---	---	--	---------------------------------------

This week, I feel that I need to start by offering a few apologies.

Firstly, I'd like to apologise for McTaf.

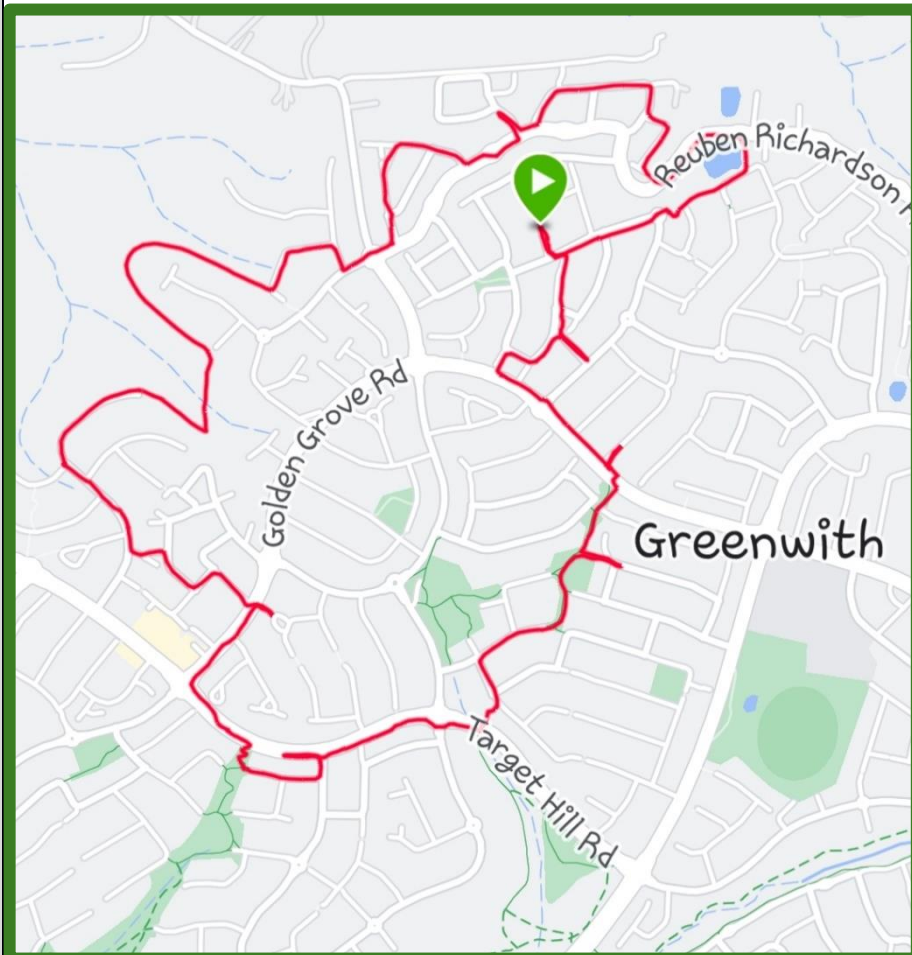

Secondly, I'd like to apologise to Bus Stop. I did promise that all boobie pics would be anonymous, yet last week I blatantly disregarded this sacred oath and mentioned whose bus-t*ts I was posting. As he pointed out, any pervert (Nifty) could easily stalk him; as his phone number and address are fairly easily available.

Thirdly, I'd like to apologise on behalf of Inherendo. It seems that last week I sang her praises just a little too much. It was in fact Mumma Inherendo who made the moussaka. All hail In-mumma's-endo. Obviously, the thermometer did not fall far from the b*tthole; as Inherendo has clearly inherited her mum's culinary skills.

Lastly, I'd like to once again apologise for McTaf.

Seriously, can it get much colder??? I swear I didn't warm up the entire run. Even though I don't think the Hare could have found any more hills if he'd tried. It seemed that we were going up hill the entire time.

There was plenty of trail to follow. Our Hare must have had an abundance of left over flour, as even Ninja decided there was enough about the place that she may as well eat some. At least, I really HOPE it was flour!!

The 'Farcowie' tribe panted away through the huge suburb of Greenwith, never knowing where we were. Although we were mostly running in the pitch dark, we were often spoilt for views of the city and its surrounding lights in the distance.

I'm certain we must have run through the rifle range at one point. I swear I heard gun shots and even felt a bullet whiz past me. So, I quickly whipped my panty liner out of my undies and stuck it to my ear for safety. I felt much more protected after that. It was very dark, but I swore I saw Budda run past me with a tampon string hanging out of his ear.

There was no promise of a drink stop, yet there were multiple sightings of a barelegged, dodgy-looking dude at various points along the run. If he was really 'nifty', he'd have managed to hide some mulled wine up those shorts of his.

Once back at Nifty's virgin home, we tried our best to warm up..... unsuccessfully. Although his delicious warm soup followed by a Nosh of baked spuds with meat sauce/cheese/CC's/sour cream certainly helped a lot. Dessert was a choice of lamingtons or iced bun – yum.

Bearded Clam was sporting a very fresh, clean shaven look this week. Crunchy cleverly suggested a renaming to 'Brazilian Clam'. Luckily, as is tradition, he had a beer in his hand – so he will always be 'Beer'ded'.

We are at Elf's HQ this coming week. I will not be there, so although I tried my best to hand over my scribe duties to someone, there were no eager takers. I guess you'll all have to arm-wrestle for the privilege.

As requested by our Trail Mistress; Olive, I have attached the 24-25 Hareline. Please take a look at it to see if you can fill Olive's gap.

City-Bay is fast approaching. It seems that I need to finish this trash with yet another apology. The fee (and link) I had been posting for the last few weeks was apparently for the half-marathon. I DID think that $105 was quite excessive. So, thanks to Chesty for the proof-reading. Our announcements now have the correct info (maybe). Late entry from 3rd Sept onwards!

See you in a fortnight.
