16 Runners & 2 Dogs - YAY

Well, I'm now a believer in on-line dating. In less than one week, Olive Oil did manage to find a wife to help cook for her. It was someone else's wife, but let's not be pedantic. This week Betty Boop not only cooked soup to help Olive provide Nosh for her run, but she also stayed back to warm it up. She missed out on walking her 100th run to stay back at a dark and scary park so that the rest of us could have some absolutely delicious pea and ham soup to help warm our hearts and souls on a chilly evening. That Boop is a good egg, I don't care what Olive says about her. 😊😊

After setting her run, Olive arrived at the park all tired out. She admitted that she was one stuffed Olive. As long as it was with those little red pimentos, not anchovies, cos that would be gross.

'Are we'? was heard called at 7.16 as we got cold and restless. We set off as soon as we could once Budda had taken his thongs off this feet and Moped had picked his thong from his butt crack. Once again, the poor walkers had been left to their own devices as no walk had been set for them. So Unstoppable became the 'live hare' and walked ahead, making their own long and convoluted way to Olive's place for a drink stop.

SAY WHAT?

The run had us running up one main road to another, to another, to another. There is certainly more traffic between 7pm and 8pm than you imagine there should be. Where is everyone going at that time of night? No-one could hear the calls of 'on-on'. Instead, we hoped that each other knew 'morse code' and that a waving torch light meant for the others to follow.

A while ago Bearded Clam found himself on the wrong side of the tracks. This week he found himself on the wrong side of the creek. Unlike someone sensible who would just come back the way they came, he stubbornly decides to keep running to see where he comes out. Miraculously (like the last time) somehow, he finds us again. Maybe he's installed a hidden GPS tracker in the Hash Horn, because I can't work out how else he does it.

The runners were pleased to meet up with the walkers at the drink stop. After some yummy port to re-energise us, off we ran again – the whole 50m to the park where we were greeted with Boop and her Soop.

In our Announcements this week there is something of interest from Flash. Chesty explained what the 'Fat Bastard' run is all about. This run is for; (you guessed it) Fat Bastards. People of over 100kgs. Never fear.... If you are not 100kgs, you are still welcome to participate. Attendees are weighed and bricks and other weights are added to you until you weigh 100kgs. It's only a walk, so you won't be running with bricks. It's at Victor Harbour. Please contact Flash (details in the announcements) to register your interest and preferred date. Sounds like a great event.

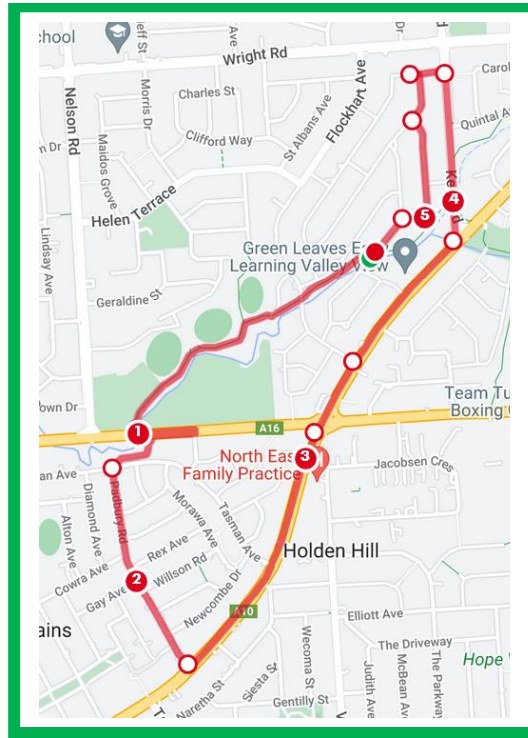

Olive will be away for a month, running in some overseas marathon dressed as Wonder Woman. She said she will not be pushing herself, but will run slowly. All I know is that when I was a kid and used to watch Wonder Woman, it was when she ran slowly that she really ran super-fast and the camera man would focus on one particular part of her anatomy bouncing up and down. Men were mesmerised watching her run.... just as women everywhere were mesmerised by Matt Shervington running the 100m final in the 1998 Commonwealth Games.... He's the reason cameras no longer focus below the waist. But I digress.... Next week's run is TUESDAY night folks. Due to the long weekend it's a joint run with the Harriettes.
