9 Hashers - but not me

You know what they say about what happens if you assume: you make an ass out of u and me.

Well, last week I wasn't at Bearded's run, so I wrote this in the trash:

"I'm assuming the following happened:

Ran/walked trail

Circle

Beer

Nosh

Beer

Beer

Well, this week, it seemed that the only things on the above list that happened - or at least were prepared, (because the 'Keg Master' provided it), was beer.

I insert now the observations from McTaf, who asked me to 'assemble a thin tissue of lies', as once again, I couldn't make it.

But why lie I say, when the truth is so amusing???

Every aspect of mondays run was a shit fight.
Olive Oil was at her immaculate best.

9 intrepid hashers turned up to the Mitcham reserve. There was no trail, no designated venue and NO OLIVE!!

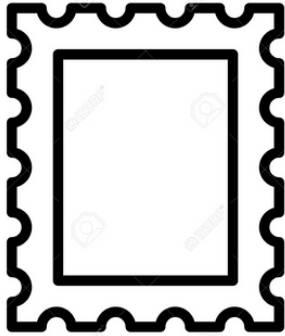

Everyone was asking everyone else if they were a co hare?
"No" was the reply

Eventually Olive saunters up to the venue with that look of total bewilderment on her face.

"I've got good news and bad news" says Olive

"Oh fk" says everyone

"The bad news is, there's no marked trail"

"The good news is, I've put clues onto these postage stamp sized pieces of paper" (apparently written in crayon - Ed)

A collective groan

What could possibly go wrong?

Following Olives directions and utilising the base of a broken beer bottle as a magnifying glass the runners were able to navigate their way from Mitcham, around Burnside, Belair and Magill and were back to the reserve in only 3 hours. Yahooooooooooo.

The Walkers were more fortunate and Meandered their way through only seven suburbs before stumbling accidentally back to the venue.

The circle was eventually got underway under the iron fist of Unstoppable.

Meanwhile, Olive spent an hour trying to convince various pizza shops to fill an order for four pizzas.

Eventually, a shop in Mitcham agreed to Olives terms.

Mctaf volunteered to drive Olive to get the pizzas.

On the way there, she realised she had placed the pizza order with a shop in Mitcham, Victoria.

Anyway, we drove around for while, randomly, until we found a shop, and managed to rescue four pizzas from the rubbish bin out the back.

We ended up with:

1. Triple egg and pistachio
2. Mozzarella and mushroom
3. Camel meat and capers
4. Vegan, curry, lettuce and pears

Sounds very much like the Ironman competition if you ask me - Ed

Back to the venue. Hungry hashers will eat anything.

And so, despite all the Olive initiated fiascos. All the boxes for a successful hash run were ticked:

Venue

Trail

Circle

Food

Beer, wine, softies and water

Good company

Well done Olive, don't ever change. And she scored a 7/10

IRON MAN COMPETITION

HAPPY NEW YEAR!!!

And what a way to start the year but with beautiful weather, some exercise, and lovely food.

Well, as Meatloaf says: 2 out of 3 aint bad.

Our instructions for the run location were (as shown above):
BEHIND the tennis courts.

BEHIND

IN FRONT

Muck arrived at 12.50 (or was it 12.45....Who gives a fk..... no, 'he' wasn't there) and waited behind the tennis courts. And he waited and waited and waited and waited and waited and waited and waited and waited.

And waited.

The rest of us used our eyes and saw that Bearded had instead set up on the oval area in the shade, as opposed to the dust bowl of heat that was behind the tennis courts. 😊

Bearded promised us a short run, and did not lie. I added a little extra, as seen on the map.

It was mentioned to me by Wet Spot that I should have used this perfect opportunity to run in the shape of a dk and b*lls, so that I wouldn't need to draw one in; as is my custom.

Damn, why didn't I think of that!

Trail led us up and down the creek, and it really was a lovely trail to start off the year.

After cooling down in the shade and drinking some refreshments, we prepared for the challenge ahead.

Off we all went to various trees (or physical toileting establishments) to drain ourselves of fluids so as not to expel any for risk of disqualification during the contest.

We all took Crunchy's advise and steered clear of one particular loo, so as not to feel like vomiting before the games had even begun.

Let the games begin:

It was nice that Bearded brought his children along. After all, the Iron Man Challenge, like incest, it is a game the whole family can play.

First round was actually achievable: Burnt meat (just how I like it) on dry bread. Smothered in tomato sauce = Yum.

The second round was painful. Dried Weetbix (Iron Man Food) smothered in Hot English Mustard = Ouch

I was out after that, as it seems that I still have taste buds, unlike the others who continued and obviously have diminished senses.

The third course was Giblets 🤢

The fourth course was pavlova base....Hmmm.... not too bad....with Sardines 🤢

After that, I moved away and couldn't be too close as the smell of gross fish was just a little more than I wanted to bear.

In actual fact, the food itself is fresh and good. It's the combinations, copious amounts of it - in combination with the beer that is the hard part. One round of pineapple and wasabi was actually peculiarly nice.

Surprisingly, even with all the food and all the beer, no-one actually vomited....not that day anyway.... how they pulled up the next day is another thing.

It appears that the rumors are true, and that Muck can, in fact, eat Anything. He was our victor. However, I think that Bus Stop needs a special mention, as he arrived very late and caught up very quickly. (Perhaps he was feeding the delicacies to his dog Nala). Thanks Bearded!!
