Run Details	Run Report – Bigus' Place Valley View Hare – Bigus	e	Unfair and subjective Run Score
18 March 2024 Run 2532	Despite not being the custodian of the “much treasured” anchor, there is little doubt that Bigus Dikus is a bloody competitive bastard. Upon hearing of Bus Stop’s reenactment last week of the Burke and Will’s tragedy, the response was instinctive. If you reckon that was tough, hold my beer..  Armed with a backpack full of machete’s, abseiling gear and New Zealand Wellington boots, the hare proceeded to perform a realistic simulation of the Kokoda Trail Death March! After warning the Modbury Hospital to expect a larger number of casualties than usual, the hare had to soften the narrative lest he put off the whole pack. I believe the description was something along the lines of “slightly challenging terrain, with the occasional shopping trolley to be navigated”. Some of the more observant members of AH3 suspected that something didn’t sound quite right when Loose Change enquired whether Ninja would be ok on the run. His response would have done any politician proud, with vague assurances that failed to convince walkers, runners or even Ninja! As the unsuspecting runners took off on trail, they were confronted by a good variety of checks before a really challenging check at McIntyre Road delayed the pack for several minutes with trail eventually being found in the direction of the hospital. After this point we soon encountered the Modbury Kokoda Trail and after descending a couple of metres into the ravine, undertook a long, sustained battle with tree stumps, logs, impending darkness and abandoned shopping trolleys, for what seemed like a fucking eternity. As the runners accumulated many cuts and bruises, Ninja managed to navigate around the obstacles, at one stage leading the pack. Eventually we came to the end of the creek but were presented with a 2 metre climb back to civilisation. At this point the much-maligned anchor proved useful and helped us drag our muddy carcasses out of the swamp and up to the Hash Halt above. This offered an opportunity for the runners to compare their war wounds, before embarking on the long, dark trail back to the run site.		8

After a long challenging run, most of the pack arrived back together in about 1 hour 15 minutes. After a long drink of water, Ninja reckoned it had been a pretty fun run, and after several beers, most of the pack agreed it had been a good, hard, challenging run.

The run was particularly enjoyed by first time visitor, King Wally, who not only completed the run, but provided an ongoing critique throughout the duration. Amazingly, King Wally managed to memorise the hash names of everyone on the run – something that many of us running every week have trouble with.

It turns out that King Wally is a senior researcher at the University of Cardiff, specialising in longitudinal twin studies and associated personality disorders. We were all astounded when this experienced professional claimed that based on his detailed analysis, he was convinced that Mop ED and Dick ED, were in fact identical twins. After further analysis, he confidently proclaimed that we had all got their names incorrect, and Dick ED was in fact Mop ED and Mop ED is in fact Dick ED! Evidently the pair were separated at birth on the grounds no parents could reasonably be expected to handle such a troublesome pair!

For many of us this was difficult to believe, but we all agreed that we had suspected for a while that the similarities must surely be more than coincidence. School records from Modbury Primary School confirmed the enrolment back in the 70's of an obnoxious little brat named Mop ED, who wandered around the school yelling "C....E....N....T....R....A....L....S...."

We now need to entertain the shocking possibility that King Wally is correct and the hash got it wrong! That Dickhead is in fact Moped, and Moped is in fact Dickhead. It would be reasonable for both of them to be highly upset at these assertions. Thankfully, our fearless (45th and greatest ever) GM is looking into these startling allegations and will leave no shopping trolley unturned in the investigation of these sensational claims.

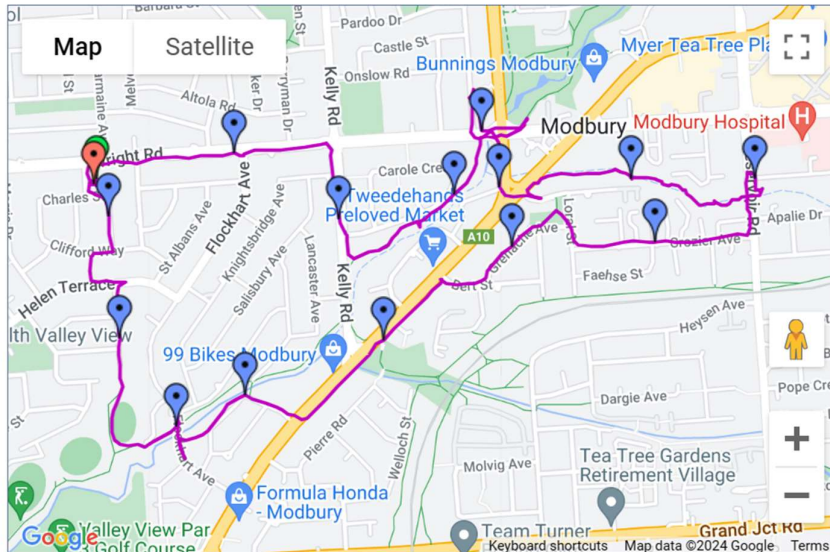

[Note to Olive Oil: @Olive, there are some great charges here for Monday night. Moped imitating Dickhead, Dickhead imitating Moped. Twins! If it's printed in the trash it must be true! Ther's no smoke without fire! Guaranteed!, Cannot Fail]

To make amends for his crimes, the hare managed to put on great nosh which capped off a challenging but enjoyable evening.

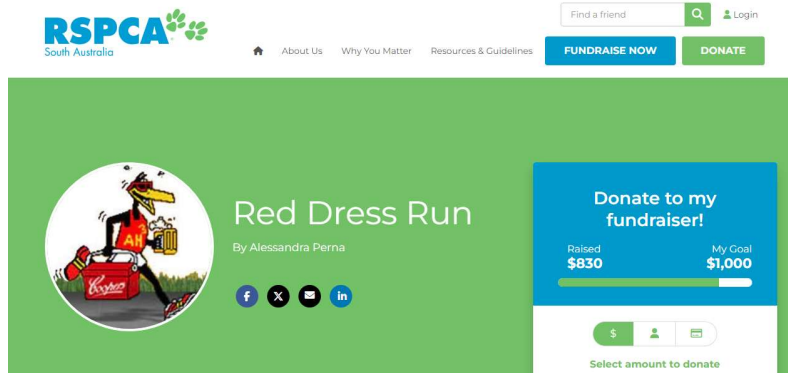

Many thanks to the hare for setting a bloody good hard run. This is genuinely what hashing should be about! If the last 2 weeks are any indication, take out life insurance before Boop and McTaf inflict their "Titanic" reenactment!
